Suriname confirms first coronavirus case, authorities will close borders

1 MIN READ

PARAMARIBO (Reuters) - Suriname on Friday confirmed its first case of coronavirus infection in a person who traveled to the South American country last week from the Netherlands, the vice president told the national assembly.

Vice President Michael Ashwin Adhin said borders and airports will close at midnight for all persons and flights.

A photograph of Dr. Anthony Fauci, an older man with grey hair, wearing a dark suit and a light blue shirt. He is holding a red fabric face mask with both hands, pulling it down away from his face. The mask features white text that reads "WASHINGTON MAGAGNIMS", "TRUMP IS A LIAR", and "MAGA". There are also some handwritten-style words like "LIES" and "WHY NOT?". A small black microphone is visible in front of him. In the top right corner of the image, there is a solid black rectangular box.
